Brian, an abuse survivor, struggled through his young adulthood. Compelled to shed light on the region’s vulnerable at-risk demographic, he says, “This event is as much a celebration of survival as it is a call to action to our community.

With statistics against them, and a lack of support and resources to prepare them for life, it’s a tough, uphill battle to beat the odds. We can make that journey easier with our collective resources and talents.

Statistics show that youth at risk, specifically those aging out of foster care programs are statistically inclined towards early homelessness, crime, imprisonment and teen parenthood.

Beating the Odds demonstrates that these children can also be future leaders and influencers – shaping California’s tomorrow.
